GERMAN PARTIES BACKING DAWES' PLAN WILL RULE

Election Results in Victories For Socialists, Clericals, Democrats and People's Party, Insuring a Big Coalition in the New Reichstag.

VETERANS, INCLUDING FORMER CHANCELLORS AND PRESENT CABINET MINISTERS, WIN SEATS

"Black Jack" Richard Kunze Threatens to Be Militant Figure—Ludendorff Denies Report of Not Declining a Mandate—Tirpitz and Bismarck Among Winners

BERLIN, May 4.—Computations based on scattered official returns in today's elections from all sections of Germany, indicate that the Socialists, Clericals, Democrats and People's Party have won enough mandates to insure a safe majority for a big coalition, which is pledged to carry out the recommendations of the reparations experts.

Although the Nationalists and Communists are making decisive gains, their present average does not indicate a menace to the middle parties in connection with further returns. The candidates of the Hitler-Ludendorff party are failing to predict.

All the parties returned their veterans, the Socialists re-elected Dr. Rudolf Hilferding, former Minister of Finance; Wilhelm Sollmann, former Minister of the Interior; Arthur Crispin, Edward Bernstein, Paul Loebe, President of the Reichstag; Dr. Rudolph Brügel, former Postmaster-General; Dr. Eduard Stämpfli, editor of Vorwärts; Otto Wells, and William Dietrich.

Dr. Bernhard Burg, Dr. Eugen Schieffer, Erich Koch and Dr. Karl von Siemens, Industrialist, were re-elected on the Democratic ticket. The Nationalists returned Oskar Hirsch, Count von Kestner and a majority of its former delegation, as did the Clericals, among the latter being Dr. J. Bell, Dr. Peter Spahn, Joachim Giesberts, and Adam St. Gerwald, the former Prussian Premier.

Rainhold Wulff, Albrecht von Graefe and Major Wilhelm Henning, who deserted the Nationalists a year ago and organized what the Berlin press called "the new party," were re-elected, as were also Herr Remmler, Herr Koensgen, Clara Zeitzkin and Herr Heineken, Communists.

May Party Candidates

Among the other People's Party candidates the Socialists continue to maintain their position in today's ballot. In the Reichstag, it is not considered that their increases will damage the four-party coalition to which the four coalition parties are pledged.

Both the Socialists' Party, headed by Gustav Stresemann, and the Communists' Party, headed by Karl Liebknecht, made greater than predicted and, while the Socialists are severely pressed by the new party, the Communists are particularly as compared with those of Great Britain and Japan.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—Two resolutions were introduced yesterday in the House with the object of ascertaining the present status of the German party in the Reichstag. The Nationalists, who had been bucked in the new Reichstag to enable it to carry through the controversial bill, with a vote held outside said from the independent groups that there will be several groups.

AUTO IS SMASHED IN TRAM COLLISION

Minor Accident Occurs on Jasper Avenue When Cars Collide

While driving an auto west on Jasper Avenue last night, Engle failed to clear a street car which with the result that two spoked in the front wheel of the auto were bent.

Opposite the auto stalled with the result that the street car and motorman A. Wheats was unable to avoid a collision.

Another minor accident occurred when a car on Jasper Avenue at 10th Street was hit by another auto while in a slight emergency stop in the same car.

The task of allocating votes to minor political parties will require another twenty-four hours.

Glasgow Man Says Politics Is a Class War

GLASGOW, May 4.—(Canadian Press Cable)—The feature of the largest May Day celebration ever held here was a speech which was presented until today was the speech by J. R. D. MacDonald, member of the House of Commons, who exhorted the crowd to "work hard" and "keep on the right side of the law."

A drive by railroad officials and miners to the hall to protest the preservation of the labor board is being continued by the Blacklist members of Congress to vote to defeat the bill. The question is whether or not the Blacklist members of Congress will be fought with kid gloves methods.

EDMONTON, May 4.—Hailed as the most organized labor union in the city, the International Union of Painters has proposed the abolition of the Railmen's Local. Both sides in the fight over the dispute between railroads and railmen employed without government intervention.

WOMEN PACIFISTS NEARLY START WAR OF THEIR OWN

WASHINGTON, May 4.—A pacifist fight nearly occurred when Mrs. Nevaer Potts, president of the District of Columbia Society of the Daughters of 1812, interrupted a session of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom last night by asking:

"Have you signed the pledge to nurse no wounded soldier?" Louiss kisses drove her from the hall, but in the corridor outside the argument grew with between partisans of the two societies.

Answering a question as to whether she would allow Brigadier-General Eries, chief of the Chemical Warfare Department, to appear on the platform to deny a statement that 700 soldiers are in hospital as a result of experiments with poison gases, Miss Amy Woods, national secretary of the Women's League, said she would not repeat a statement from the platform if it came from the Secretary of War.

After much wrangling with the excitement growing nearly to the point of blows the disturbance was quelled by the hotel police.

FRANCE CRUSHES ROUMANIA IN RUGBY CONTEST AT OLYMPIC GAMES

ESKIMOS BATTLE TIE RUGBY CONTEST WITH CANADIAN NATIONALS

Score is 3 to 3—One of Most Strenuous British Rugby Games Ever Seen in the City—Both Teams Hit and Maintain a Fast Clip

Eskimos and the Canadian Nationals finished "even Stephen" in their British rugby game last Saturday at Diamond Park. The comment was freely expressed by old followers of the Englishman's rugby, that Saturday's fixture was one of the most strenuous that they had ever seen.

Players never gave up and everyone who took the field was fighting like grim death at the finish. The score was three all and those points came as the result of super-human efforts on the part of the players. Even "Queenie" Ains Young's pet bear grew excited over the outcome of the game. At times the crowd obstructed her view of the play and she was so interested she climbed back fence and from this flighty position cheered the errors of the two sides.

The first half opened with the Eskimos great kick. On to the field the National team pressed the ball into the middle of the field and the Eskimos responded with a fast centre in their efforts to score.

Four times during the first half the Eskimos were penalized and four times the Canadian Nationals missed golden opportunities to score. Although the Nationals never got the ball into the goal posts, nevertheless made things intensely interesting for the spectators in the stands.

Referee T. Potts had to stop the game to give time to the players to stop talking.

After the first half the Eskimos were pushing the "gab" and then they laid down a rule that the ball must be passed to the captain (the captain) take in this game, that the ball must be passed to the captain when the ball was more than 10 yards from the goal posts.

Now the game was much more exciting and the Eskimos were winning.

Blake Brunson was a marked man in this game and he was given a chance to get away. Dan Dunnworth, the Eskimo captain, in this half when he ran about running far and wide, ran after the ball and the ball went out. After the ball was recovered the Eskimos did not have the ball near the goal posts for the rest of the half.

Andy Spence came even better and the ball was in the goal posts.

Spence travelled on the field and came within two feet of recovering the ball and relieved the danger by getting away.

PROTECTION FOR SICK CHILDREN

Does the dismissal of a couple who were charged with neglecting to provide medical care for a sick child mean that the law can do nothing in such a case unless it is proved that the parents did not call in a doctor? And how could that be established without putting every doctor in the City in the witness box? If that is the law it needs amendment. This is one instance in which the interests of justice cannot be served unless the defendants are required to establish their innocence by naming the doctor they called. A sick child cannot be left to the mercy of parents who know that they can escape punishment by refusing to tell whether or not they provided medical attention.

WRITE AN ESSAY

Young Edmonton ought to be busy these evenings writing essays on how to prevent forest fires. It will be rather a "come down" for the boys and girls of this city if it should happen that all the prizes hung up by the Department of the Interior go to outside points. Since it is a free-for-all competition, with no restriction as to place of residence, that might occur.

The time for sending in essays has been extended to next Saturday. It is significant, and a matter for general satisfaction, that the reason is not the fewness of the competitors, but the number of them. The public and permanent value of the contest is not in the winning of the prizes, but in the development of interest among the young folks in the question of preserving the forest wealth of the nation. The more essay writers, the more men and women there will be a few years from now who will be careful to not start fires, and who will try to get others to exercise the same prudence.

The stronger and more insistent, too, will be public opinion touching every phase of the question of conserving the timber supply. The national policy of the future in regard to the use and perpetuation of this immensely valuable resource is being directly affected by this practical effort to arouse interest on the part of those who will be the voters of tomorrow. That they are responding in large numbers augurs well. The next generation may do much to offset the waste and neglect of the present one.

REACTIONS FROM THE BUREAU

Sir Henry Drayton is more than ever convinced that the country is going from bad to worse. In the reduction of the tariff he can see nothing but the partial destruction of a shelter behind which our manufacturing industries have been coaxed into a sickly and precarious existence. These, he fears, cannot survive the blasts of foreign competition which will sweep through the gaps in the protective wall. Closed factories and the migration of thousands of Canadian industrial workers to the United States are the results for which the fiscal critic of the Opposition fears and looks forward. It is a melancholy prospect, and it seems to be shared pretty generally by the down-hearted followers of Mr. Meighen.

Just why the situation should take on that drab tinge, even when viewed from the Opposition stand-point, is not very clear. Mr. Meighen toured the West last summer for the purpose of telling us what he thought was the matter with Canada. He is certainly not wanting in the talent to make plain his meaning. The burden of his argument was that the King Government had bungled the West on the tariff question, and had left the duties pretty much as it found them. And while he was talking people were getting out of the country by every train that crossed the border. Mr. Meighen even noted that fact, and cited it as something for which the Government should be held accountable. If the Opposition leader was right then he and his association cannot be right now. If because of the Meighen tariff, or in spite of it, people were leaving Canada, how comes it that more of them are to be driven out by a modification of that tariff?

The two claims are antagonistic. They do not agree. They are not even neutral as regards each other. If either is right the other must be wrong. As there is any doubt that industrial conditions have been sluggish, and that people have been flocking out of the Dominion under a tariff which Mr. Meighen claims to have been the author of, it surely would seem to be time to try the other kind of a tariff in hope of reversing those conditions. Even if it does not reverse the conditions, a tariff of the opposite character can scarcely aggravate the evils which grew up under the kind that we have had. On the evidence so ably presented by Mr. Meighen himself it would seem to be a reasonable inference that no fiscal policy could be worse than the one that has prevailed, and that almost any change would be bound to be for the better, particularly if the change were radical enough to involve a real and substantial reduction in the incidental influences of the tariff.

It is perhaps suggestive that the manufacturers themselves do not seem to be nearly so much alarmed at the prospect as their spokesmen in Parliament. They do not pretend to welcome the admission of foreign goods at lower rates of duty. But they are not declaring that they intend to shut up shop. Some of them claim that they will lose business and money because of the invasion of their market by outside competitors. But others say that they intend to meet this invasion by putting more energy into their selling campaigns and by cutting producing and marketing costs. Thus far the only one to throw up his hands is a manufacturer of incubators in the province of Quebec, and he would perhaps have gone down in any case. The manufacturers generally are likely to fight to the succumb without an effort, and if the fighting results in greater efficiency, less waste, lower prices of products, and a larger turnover, both the manufacturers and the country will be better because they are compelled to fight.

The difference in the cost of farm machinery will not make the farmers of Canada rich. Neither will the mining industry, the fishing industry and the lumbering industry be made prosperous by the lower cost of buying equipment. But a cut of $24,000,000 in taxes will substantially increase the buying power of the public. And reduction of that kind always induces a result larger than the direct saving. The encouragement that is given to enterprise by reduced taxation is of more importance than the amount the public is thus enabled to keep and invest; as the discouragement resulting from high taxation is altogether out of proportion to the amount actually taken from business. Prosperity is mainly a matter of psychology. Nobody ever got rich without believing that he could do it, and no community ever turned adversity into success whose people did not think that the thing could be done. The lower duties will stimulate buying, even by people who could afford to buy if the duties had not been lowered. Larger trade and busier times are in prospect, not merely to the extent to which the reduced taxation will make that possible, but because the human mind is sicker to savor hope or despair altogether beyond the actual change in circumstances.

THE WAY OF PROGRESS

The Englishman (Calcutta):

India generally, educated India is not standing at the cross-roads, but is travelling backwards towards the age of exclusiveness. But before she becomes a heretic, let me assure her that Europe has acquired her strength by learning that Europe has a right to teach her, while still holding fast the best of her own traditions. So modern India should learn "to weave into the tapestry of Indian life such threads from the West will enrich without altering the outline."

SOLIDER STATESMEN

London Sunday Express:

It is certain that there has been no public recognition of the part played by the British naval and military commanders in the Queenstown outrage. They have the situation by their admirable self-control and self-restraint. The temptation to resort to instant reprisals must have been acute. A Mussooli Corfu bombardment might have led to an Anglo-Irish catastrophe. But the English have been able to restrain themselves. The destruction was first met after the soldiers were shot down. Let us not be unmindful of what we owe to the disciplined sagacity of our Army and Navy.

THE OLD ORDER CHANGETH

Louisville Courier-Journal (commenting on imperialist naval rivalries achieved by Labor's rise to power):

The old order has developed in Great Britain indicates that the lion has adopted the fawn of its cubs, the island home of the Empire embracing the example set up by its adventurous progeny—Canada, Australia and New Zealand. In this case, the ultimate result that the English have in view is not to be determined.

Once derailed as a menace, the new order proves to be a workable ideal. Even its severest critics admit that, judged by its fruits, this new order is not all bad.

BRITAIN COMING BACK

Industrial conditions in Great Britain are not normal, but figures in the press are apt to convey a misleading impression. Not only is the volume of unemployment decreasing, not the bulk of it is in a few trades, principally engineering and shipbuilding.

The monthly average of involuntary idleness among all British trade unions was 2.1% in 1913. In the first quarter of 1923 it was 12.8—a disquieting figure. In February 1924 it had declined to 8.5. But if engineering and shipbuilding be excluded, the percentage in the latter month was only 4.1 per cent; or a little more than double the percentage of involuntary idleness in the trade unions.

The statistics of foreign trade show a trade union percentage is the lowest since February 1923.

Statistics of foreign trade and output also show an upward trend. The output of coal in February, 1924, was 23 million tons, compared with the monthly average of 22.6 in 1913; of pig iron, 82,600,000 pounds and 64,000,000 pounds respectively. Even more striking is the increase in the volume of trade in coal. In the first quarter of 1923, total coal exports were 154,000 tons (February 1913) compared with 250,000 tons monthly in the first quarter of 1923.

British exports in February, 1924, were 45,000,000 pounds compared with a monthly average of 44,000,000 pounds in 1913. Imports were 87,000,000 pounds and 64,000,000 pounds respectively. Even more striking is the increase in the imports of trade in coal. The monthly average of coal imports in February 1923 was 1,000,000 tons (February 1913) compared with 1,200,000 tons monthly in the first quarter of 1923.

The world is poor for British trade and industry unless some unforeseen catastrophe occurs, such as a strike epidemic at "home" or some new respiratory disease. Even if it does not reverse the conditions, a tariff of the opposite character can scarcely aggravate the evils which grew up under the kind that we have had. On the evidence so ably presented by Mr. Meighen himself it would seem to be a reasonable inference that no fiscal policy could be worse than the one that has prevailed, and that almost any change would be bound to be for the better, particularly if the change were radical enough to involve a real and substantial reduction in the incidental influences of the tariff.

It is perhaps suggestive that the manufacturers

BACK FROM CALIFORNIA

To the Editors: The Bulletin:

California and Alberta one could scarcely imagine two more contrast. One is the sunny south, the playgrounds of America; the other the sunless north, the land of hope and promise. The former is the land where a man can make a permanent home. Through the sunless north he must travel, often through return home. It is a land of wonders, of beauty, of mountains, of mineral wealth. Its mineral wealth makes it an attraction to prospective buyers. One is the playground. Even Hollywood has helped to make it a playground for the movie stars who hope to become movie stars. Many heartaches follow in the wake of the sunless north.

I think this might well be said of California from all angles. In the sunless north a man and his person go forth without funds, with a well-filled purse it is a good place to start out and from a homestead to build up a fortune. In the sunless north a man goes forth with a well-filled purse but while the possible remains, the sunless north is much less want, much less unemployment, and much more opportunity.

Make a careful calculation here and there and the number who get to California to stay may be more than those who leave.

Up north in the tourist country of Ontario, Canada, the ice had just begun to melt and the first chill of winter haunts the air night and day. But sunnier days are approaching and the snow is melting from the trees and the white blanket of snow under a white blanket is gone.

Picture the scene: The salmon, normally a deep-sea fish, is now hasty swimming on the surface where the water is still cold, but the water is warming, the salmon will go deeper, always living in the same temperature as the water. In August the Indians will be trolling for salmon along the coast from Nootka to the deep-water trout.

A mysterious intelligence guides him.

In a few weeks the small-mouth bass, black bass of the North Country will begin spawning. May is nature's favorite month for the salmon, June for the trout, July for the bass. But the bass is approaching the end of its spawning period.

In a few weeks the small-mouth bass, black bass of the North Country will begin spawning. May is nature's favorite month for the salmon, June for the trout, July for the bass. But the bass is approaching the end of its spawning period.

Picture the scene: The salmon, normally a deep-sea fish, is now hasty swimming on the surface where the water is still cold, but the water is warming, the salmon will go deeper, always living in the same temperature as the water. In August the Indians will be trolling for salmon along the coast from Nootka to the deep-water trout.

Short Session on Winnipeg Wheat Market Very Active; Buying Good, Prices Down

WINNIPEG, May 5.—Today's short session on the wheat market was quite active with increased offerings coming out shortly after the opening, but the buying was good and prices advanced about half a cent from the previous day. The grain bank future at St. Paul, the finish in the wheat market was heavy, with the May 10 contract up 103 3-4 and July 104 1-8 to 104 1-2, and July 104 7-8 to 104 1-2. The canola market was fairly steady, a little easier with a light trade worked. Flax was steady and about unchanged on a small volume of business.

All grades of cash wheat were in demand today with only light offers of grain and spreads unchanged fractionally.

Cash oats and barley were in moderate demand with spreads unchanged. Rye and flax were quiet under a light enquiry.

LLOYD IS BEST COMEDY LOVER

ives Animated Conjugation of Verb, To Love, in New Picture

HOLLYWOOD—Watching Harold Lloyd and his petticoat leading lady, it's hard to believe that animated conjugation of the verb To Love, in filming his new comedy, "The Love of Life," will ever have had life may be on a movie comedian.

The young star, like your earnest gallant of serious drama, has got to make love to be loved, so at least he thinks, which isn't so easy for the screen as in real life.

Yes, the young star, like the dashing Leichthay need but be tenderly graceful or impudent. The comedian, on the other hand, must stick like a rock, which isn't so easy for the screen as in real life.

Hence, while the latter may get a dozen of fan letters, he gets few, if any, push notes. Who ever thinks of him as a romantic? Who ever thinks of what life without a modicum of gush? What! Indeed!

However, I am certain that Harold Lloyd is, in what he puts into pictures, the most romantic of all American boys. I say that with deep conviction, because he is the author of his own film. He makes love (not in earnest, of course) since his heart belongs to Anna Christie (not Anna Christie) as it would be a pleasure instead of a trial.

One might expect a day on the net with Lloyd to disclose a malediction of names, names, names—names.

JOBYNA RALSTON

now—anything and everything except pretentious wooling. But such, and lots more, is what we have seen.

This picture, as yet unnamed, deals with the life of a girl who, in the name of a bride's family, visited upon a young honeymooning couple, Lloyd and Anna.

The cameras were grinding away at Lloyd's expense, and the amount of groceries and a turkey went at it rather. His bride, the defendant, John, was a boy from Tennessee, was hurling herself into his arms, and he was a boy.

She had to do a good deal or give up for as they stand embraced, the bride's face was a mask for the groom's face as a mask for her own good. Here is the fatal gift of beauty combined with the capital of her physical charms. And because she is the most open, most easygoing adventure man can keep from using them for her own good.

The greatest contrast in the two pictures is the girl's face. She is very quickly what Anna lacked—womanliness—but Anna was a woman, and the scene of her sudden masculinity hardened in her character; she had no man's heart, and she had no hood. For it doesn't seem to pay to be too simple-minded a come-on for a man.

"That's 'Tess,'" tragedied she. "The 'Unwanted Child' is to be made.

"That's 'Tess,'" tragedied she.
